The Face Behind Facebook

👁 33 ✓ 1 ★ 2

Chapter 1 by Kiri

If Facebook had a profile, what would it look like?

Chapter 2 by Kiri

He or she? Young or old? Cat lover or dog lover? Single or in a relationship? These are the questions we're looking to be answered on a Facebook profile. And without them, you're a book without a cover. So, who would be the face of Facebook? Sure, you could go the easy route and say it's the founder of Facebook, Mark Zuckerberg. But really, that's just being lazy. Don't get me wrong, Zuckerberg deserves all the credit for his invention, however, what it has become now is out of his control, out of control of any one person really.

Facebook is a chameleon. It molds into what you want it to be. You want it to be a link to old friends, it can do that. You want it to be the voice of your cause/movement/organization, it can be that. You want it to be an unsafe social media trap where teens can be sucked into virtual torment and emotional scarring, unfortunately that is an option. Does that make Facebook the monster, though? Or merely its users taking advantage of internet anonymity and free speech?
